Children's Garden Pre-Visit Guide

Missouri Botanical Garden

Today I get to go to the Children's Garden at the Missouri Botanical Garden.

Most of the activities will be outside.

I will hear the water from the waterfall inside.

The noise is very loud.
It is OK to cover my ears if that noise bothers me.

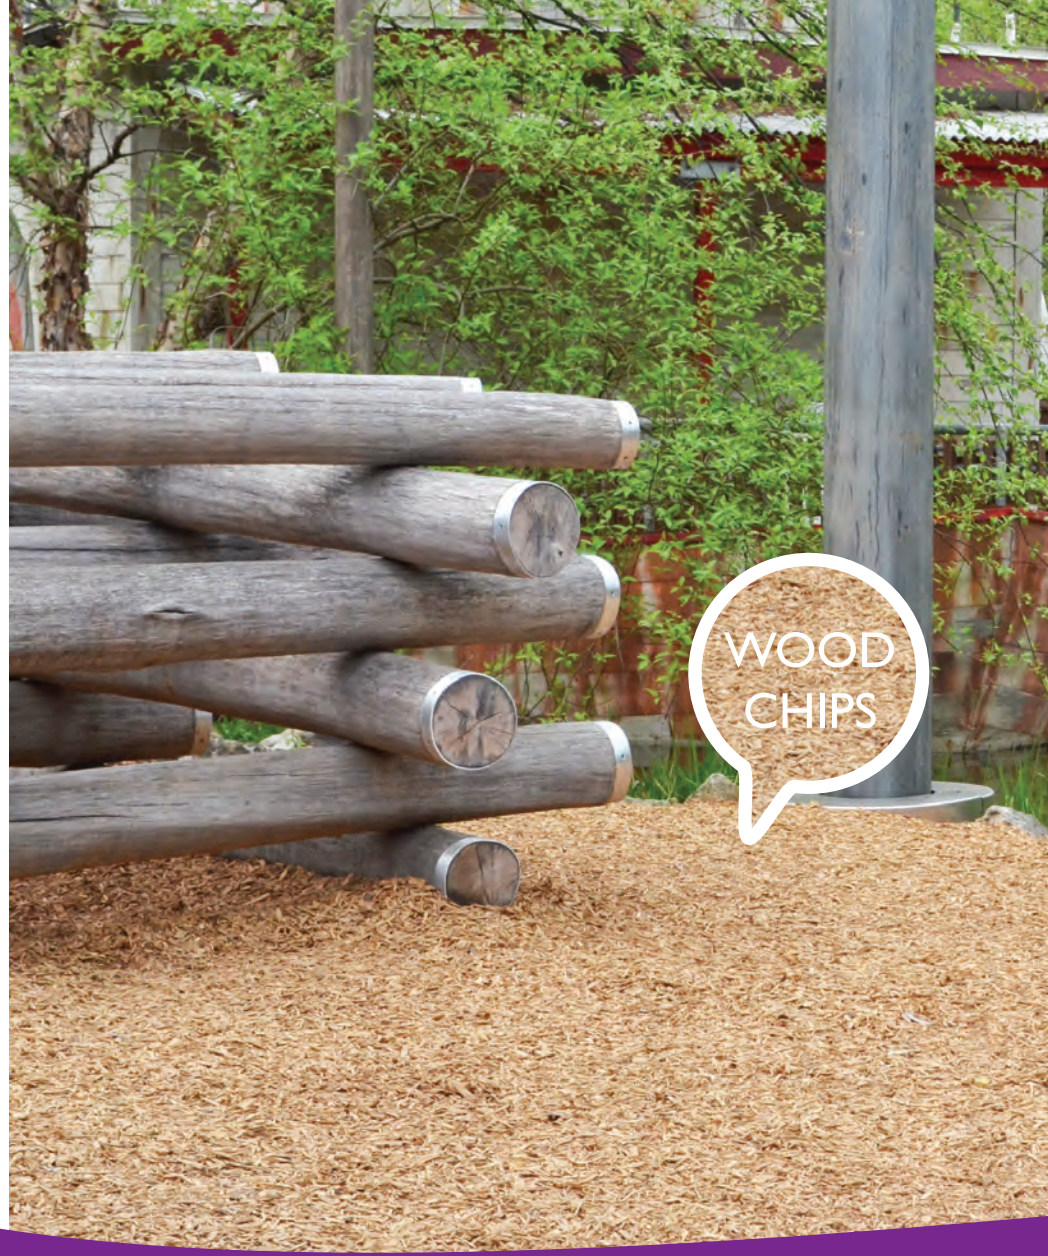
There may be a line to buy tickets.

I may have to wait.

The Children's Garden is a PUBLIC PLACE and there may be a lot of other adults and children visiting too.

I can choose which path to take once we enter: "Settler's Path," "Adventurer's Path," "Discoverer's Path," or "Botanist's Path."

In all the areas, there may be materials I will need to share with other children, and I may need to wait my turn.



Sand or wood chips might get in my shoes.

There are pathways that are different from sidewalks.

Some of them are hard to walk on and move.

Some of the areas may have a lot of children playing.

The most important thing is to LISTEN WELL and everyone will have a good day and be HAPPY!
